

Castelfeder “Glener” Pinot Nero

ALTO ADIGE (ITALY)

Originally founded in 1970 by A. Giovanette, then taken over by his son, Günther Giovanett in 1985. Continuing in the same tradition as his father, Günther still has close contact with winegrowers, careful selection of the best production areas and well-aimed cultivation of choice varietals

Involved in every aspect of the winery: this passion for winemaking begins in the vineyard with the planting of the vines, advising and working with the winegrowers and continues through the harvest and gentle pressing of the grapes in the cellar up to the vinification of the wines and finally to their marketing. The result of this difficult but rewarding job is wine to be proud of.

Alto Adige Wine Region of Italy

Climate: Being the most northern region in Italy, Alto Adige has very cold winters and warm summers.

Situated amongst the Alps, it has some of the steepest vineyards in the world (some as high as 3,600 feet!) This region produces a wide variety of grape varietals that include: pinot nero, lagrein, cabernet sauvignon, merlot, riesling, kerner, pinot bianco and schiava grigia. The best wines from this region have focus, grip, and a solid presence. There is also a quickly growing sparkling wine industry in this area as chardonnay is prolific throughout the region.

The region of Alto Adige is completely land locked, with the river Adige running through it (the second largest in Italy). Even with such steep hills, vineyards are located throughout the region. Historically, wine has been produced here since Roman times. Once part of Austria and occupied by Germany during the war, the region was granted its autonomy in 1947. Today, the region is still bilingual with both German and Italian being the official languages.

Pinot Nero (Pinot Noir) has been growing in Alto Adige since the middle of the 19th century and thrives in its cool climate. Pinot Nero from the Alto Adige yields well-structured wines that are elegant and fragrant with a rich smooth finish.
