

Jean d'Alibert Languedoc Rouge

LANGUEDOC-ROUSSILLON (FRANCE)

Part of the Jean d'Alibert cooperative, the grapes for this wine come from the higher altitude areas of The Petit Causse with chalky soil enjoying a semi-arid Mediterranean climate with mild winters.

Grapes: Syrah & Grenache

Viniculture: unoaked; Harvest at optimal maturity. Destemming of all grapes. Short vinemaking (5-6 days). Daily crushing with fermenting temperature controls. After devatting and pneumatic pressing, wines are kept in air-conditioned wineries. Bottling : 18 months after vinification, maturing can begin in cellars at regulated temperature of 16°C

Alcohol: 13% vol.

Tasting Notes

Appearance: Intense red with ruby hints

Nose: Strawberry & herbal fragrances

Palate: Silky smooth full mouth feel with flavors of ripe red berry fruits leading to a lingering finish with notes of spice.

Serving Recommendations: Round and fruity, this fine wine served at room temperature will go perfectly with roasted red meats or with stews. Slightly chilled, it will go with grilled meats, brochettes and roast poultry. Serving temperature : 18-20°C.

Languedoc-Roussillon Wine Region of France

Climate: Languedoc is usually warm and dry throughout the year, and has very mild winters. It borders the Mediterranean Sea on one side of the region, which lends more warmth to the climate.

Languedoc is the largest wine-producing area in France; it produces more wine in this area than in the entire United States. This is also one of the most innovative wine regions in the world today thanks to innovative wine producers that have been changing the wines produced in this area since the 1990s.

A wide variety of grapes are grown in this region including: syrah, grenache, cabernet sauvignon, and chardonnay. There are four AOC regions within Languedoc, or wines can be classified as "Vins de Pays d'Oc".

Minervois is located north of Corbières, and is known for producing soft and juicy red wines. The predominant grape grown here is Syrah, and can have rich berry flavors.