

Le Petit Berticot Cabernet Sauvignon ATLANTIQUE (FRANCE)

BERTICOT represents today 118 winegrowers spread across 1000 hectares of land (55% of the AOP Côtes de Duras). The co-op has a cellar equipped with modern material, capable of making 50,000 hectoliters of wine. It has become a renowned brand in France, Europe and awarded in all top competitions.

Grapes: Cabernet Sauvignon

Alcohol: 12.5% vol.

Color: Ruby red

Nose: Summer cherries

Palate: Macerated cherries with baking spices, vanilla bean, soft integrated tannins.

Pairings: Grilled steak, roasted meats, hardy cheeses.

South West France | Atlantique

Climate: Bordeaux (pictured in red above) and the Atlantique IGP which is within South West France (pictured in grey above) have a maritime climate. The region is sheltered by pine forests on both the south and the west. The summers tend to be warm and the winters are relatively mild.

The Atlantique IGP, known as Vin de pays de l'Atlantique until 2006, is a French wine region with a protected geographical indication produced in five "departments" of the Atlantic coast. The appellation belongs to the vineyards of South West France, but also includes the wines of the department of Gironde which cannot claim the appellations of origin of the Bordeaux vineyards.

The most widely planted white varietal of IGP Atlantique is Sauvignon Blanc. It is acidic, floral, and herbal. Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot and Cabernet Franc are the most widely planted red varietals of the IGP Atlantique.